Ned Hamadache Therapy Assistant

Ned Hamadache is a young dedicated third-year Bachelor of Speech and Hearing Sciences Student passionate about helping children with speech impairments and language disorders and committed to becoming a Speech Pathologist. An energetic Therapy assistant dedicated to providing top-quality, client-centred care and highly skilled in dealing with children who have behavioural issues, speech impairments, ASD, and language disorders. He is resourceful and effective at navigating complex clinical environments to optimize client care.

In Ned's spare time he enjoys going to the gym, gaming and playing competitive football (soccer) for a local Premier League club on weekends. He often uses his love of sports and video games to build rapport when meeting new clients and often intertwines these activities within sessions.

For the past 4 years Ned has been a Therapy assistant working before and after school as well as class assistance with children aged 5 to 17. Ned assesses client conditions, monitors behaviours and updates supervising psychologist/speech pathologists with observations and concerns while also communicating information and providing support to client's families.

Ned's skills are:

- Group Therapy Coordination and 1:1 Support
- Treatment Planning and Progress Evaluations
- Relationship Building
- Critical Thinking
- Reliable & Trustworthy
- Excellent Interpersonal Skills
- Friendly & Positive Attitude
